In this sense deconstruction is regarded as a forum of anti-structuralism. Deconstruction rejects most of the assumptions of structuralism and more vehemently "binary opposition" on the grounds that such oppositions always privilege one term over the other, that is, signified over the signifier. 3. Differance

3. Some Key Terms - Derrida: The Father of Deconstruction

Derrida approaches all texts as constructed around elemental oppositions which all discourse has to articulate if it intends to make any sense whatsoever.

Deconstruction - Wikipedia

The present paper examines a group of constructions at the level of discourse. Such constructions are part of the family of complementary-contrastive constructions in English. These constructions result from the combination of two elements, which despite being apparently contrary, actually complement each other.
